

Can Your Child Speak Freely At Home, But Not In School?

Does your bright, chatty child fall silent in some social situations? Do they struggle to smile and make eye-contact with others? Do you constantly ask them to say 'Thank you and Please'?

Selective Mutism is an anxiety condition which affects 1 in every 143 children globally. Children who have Selective Mutism are NOT shy, they are most often social butterflies. Selective Mutism is NOT a choice.

Those who suffer from Selective Mutism long to socially engage and talk, but they physically can't due to the 'freeze response'.

To learn more about Selective Mutism please visit:

www.voiceforselectivemutism.com